Data protection (Club rule 4.7)

By signing an Application Form or by renewing membership online or by paper form, members shall be deemed to have accepted that their personal details will be stored on computers and be processed by the Club as the Data Controller for as long as their membership continues.

In addition, members who wish to affiliate to the sport governing body shall be deemed to have agreed that the Club may, on their behalf, enter their details into the computer systems operated by the sport governing body, for which the sport governing body is the Data Controller.

At the point of resignation from the Club, insofar as the Club's computer systems are concerned, the Club shall comply with the "right to be forgotten", should the resigning member wish to exercise that right. However, the resigning member would need to deal directly with the sport governing body to exercise their right in respect of its computer systems.

In regard to the "right to be forgotten", the Club shall take reasonable endeavours to purge the ex-member's name and contact details from all Club databases and websites. Neither the ex-member's past postings on the Club's social media, nor reference to the ex-member in race results or newsletters will be redacted.

For junior members, a parent or guardian shall explicitly record their acceptance of the junior member's details being processed on the Club's computers on the Junior member's Application Form.

The Club shall not sell or make available to third party organisations members' details with the exception of:

- the sport governing body for members who affiliate to it
- the payment system used to collect online membership subscription renewals
- online membership processing service
- other organisations for which members have given their approval, for example, to allow selected members to gain access to preferential race entry portals

Conversely, the Club may forward information that it has received from a third party to members that the Committee believes may be of interest to or benefit members such as beneficial race entry terms for affiliated members.

The Club actively uses email to advise members of forthcoming events and other topical items. Members shall have the right to opt out of receipt of Club circulars. A small number of emails that the Committee deems to be important may be sent regardless of opt-out requests (e.g. invitation to renew membership online).

The Club is able to state that it will not divulge members' details to third parties and will honour requests to opt out from receipt of circular emails. However, members are reminded that the Club has no control over the sport governing body, which will send affiliated members email of its own without reference to the Club, and which has its own operating practices regarding safeguarding members' details.
